The A.N.A. and Its Presidents

FRANK G. DUFFIELD Tenth President, 1914 and 1915

By

JACK W. OGILVIE, LM 93, HISTORIAN

A tenure of thirty-eight years that extended from January, 1905 until September, 1942, as an officer or employee of the Association, is the service record held by our tenth President. It will, without doubt, stand unchallenged for many years. Let us review the life of this dedicated and complaisant gentleman who served so long and so well.

Frank G. Duffield

Frank Duffield was born October 4, 1866 in Clayton, N. J., and spent his boyhood there. He moved to Baltimore when a young man and became connected with the printing and publishing business. This tall and slender man was so modest that he never gave himself credit for any accomplishments. He edited his autobiography to the mere essentials the only time that it was published. From it we learn that he began collecting coins rather late in life — for a President. He started in 1901 and his specialties were countermarked coins, medals and paper money.

He enrolled in the Association late in 1901 as No. 324 and started his official career as a member of the Board in 1905, serving three years. A District Secretary during 1908, he became General Secretary in 1909 for two terms. Out of office in 1910, he became First Vice President under Brenner for the next two years. During the nine-year interval, he drew the original sketch for the convention badge, took a firm stand in the political melee of 1909, was a member of the incorporating committee and was involved in many more affairs of the organization.

Frank G. Duffield attained the high office by defeating Carl Wurtzbach and was the last President to take office on the "lame duck" or January 1, date. R. W. McLachlan became First Vice President and Charles Shinkle, Second Vice President. Judson Brenner, Ben Green and Fred Merritt were new members of the Board and when Green died, Wurtzbach was named to the vacancy.

The tenth President took office at a somewhat crucial time, the dawn of a new era. Whether the Association would hold the pace set in the last few years or retrogress was in the hands of his administration. This was putting him on a spot, as they say in a variety show "No one would give to a leopard." In his first message to the membership, he asked for a sustained drive for new members, more informative papers in The Numismatist, and stressed better arrangements of exhibits at conventions. By these and other means, he hoped to overcome the inevitable let-down after an apex had been reached. He found it difficult to surpass an event which took place in New York City from January 17 to February 18, 1914.

During that month, probably the largest exhibit of American rare coins ever assembled took place at the American Numismatic Society's headquarters. Such coins as the 1783 Nova Constellatio pattern set in silver, a Brasher Doubloon, two Continental dollars in silver, four 1804 dollars, unique Territorial gold, the Confederate Half Dollar and many rare patterns were among those displayed. These rarities were from the collections of William Woodin, Howard Newcomb, Dr. George French, Farran Zerbe, Judson Brenner, James Ellsworth, Waldo Newcomer and a number of others. The bigwigs of the fraternity put on a show long to be remembered.

It was reaching for the impossible to climax this coin carnival with another numismatic event, but the Springfield Coin Club did its utmost by highly advertising the coming A.N.A. convention. It convened for four days, starting August 22. Advance publicity brought out sixty-eight members, including four ex-Presidents and the usual visitors. One sometimes wonders if these inevitable visitors were curiosity seekers, a sprinkle of vest pocket dealers (with no bourse in those days maybe they used a brief case) or prospective collectors. An excellent program was arranged which included the reading of papers by W. C. Stone, R. W. McLachlan, Carl Wurtzbach, Edgar Adams, ex-Presidents Heaton and Zerbe, S. H. Chapman and Duffield. Exhibits were splendid but there was a shortage of cases.

A resolution was adopted sanctioning a proposal by Zerbe and Wood that the word "numismatics" be defined as including the study and collecting of all forms and kinds of money, including medals, and consequently not confined to the kind of money expressed by the word "coin." The new definition was submitted to the Editors of dictionaries and encyclopedias in the English speaking language, who in turn incorporated it into these books.

It was learned that, in addition to Ben Green, death had claimed J. Schulman of Holland, and Honorary Members Barclay V. Head and S. S. Crosby. All incumbents were reelected to their respective offices for the ensuing year. The financial statement revealed that Secretary Waldo Moore received sixty-dollars for services rendered at the 1913 convention but this included his hotel bill! They gave him a raise in 1914 - to a hundred dollars! Transportation, maybe? But everything was prewar prices then - nine volumes of The Numismatist starting from 1894 for nine dollars!

The influence of the war in Europe was felt in the early months of 1915. Interest in numismatics waned and new applications for membership slowed to a trickle. The President and his group tried their best to keep up interest but despite all efforts, more members dropped from the roll than entered. The A.N.S. remained loyal and continued to use The Numismatist to publish its reports.

The Board knew that it would take additional inducement to get a good representation at the 1915 convention, so they chose San Francisco with its Panama-Pacific Exposition. The triple attraction of the City by the Golden Gate, the Fair and the convention was supposed to attract a large number of persons. It boomeranged! The long trek to the West Coast was too far and all the efforts of ex-President Zerbe and his newly formed Pacific Coast Numismatic Society, went for naught. It failed! Only fifteen of the faithful registered during the three days beginning August 20. The inevitable visitors, when they were most needed, were absent. Election results disclosed that Henry O. Granberg won over R. W. McLachlan and was elected eleventh President. It was revealed that Duffield had accepted the position of Editor and Business Manager of The Numismatist. The A.N.A. was presented a commemorative medal by the Exposition officials for its participation in the Fair. The small assembly concluded its business meetings and like the 1904 St. Louis affair, turned to the Midway for their entertainment. Perhaps several stopped at the souvenir coin department and purchased a few of the commemorative coins of the Exposition.

The short twenty month Duffield administration closed with fewer members than when it started. Present day numismatists who enrolled at that time are Ernest Jonas, Mrs. R. Henry Norweb, R. C. Garlick and Charles Markus, our sixteenth President. The list also included several members who lived until just recently.

Duffield's career as a writer started in the official magazine in 1904 with quite a number of articles appearing from 1907 until 1917. Sometime later he wrote a series on "Classifying Countermarked Coins of the World," a branch of numismatics on which he was considered an authority. He often used the pen name of "Portuguese Joe" and "The Coins of Julio Popper, Red Rover" appeared under this cognomen in the September, 1916 Numismatist. It was reprinted, by popular demand, in 1938. Those interested in the origin of "Popper dollars" should read the article.

Frank Duffield was in the printing and publishing business all of his life. Upon becoming Editor and Business Manager of the official magazine he combined his vocation with his avocation and fit perfectly into the position. He held it for the next twenty-seven years. Prior to his taking over, the paper had been printed in Federalsburg, Md., but mailed from Brooklyn. With the Editor in nearby Baltimore, it was published and mailed from Federalsburg. He built the magazine to triple in size during his lifetime tenure and managed so ably and silently that his efforts were seemingly "taken for granted." He always modestly declined credit for the great advance in standards of quality to which it had risen. He found time to participate in other numismatic activities during this long period, taking an active part in most of the conventions and attended a total of thirty during his lifetime. He headed the Fifty Year Index committee and the finished volume was dedicated to him. He was awarded Honorary membership at the 1942 convention.

Duffield resigned as Editor and Business Manager in September, 1942, just a few days before his seventy-sixth birthday. The entire board of governors wrote glowing tributes to "Duffie" who had served the organization for his lifetime. President Ferguson praised him by saying "... his monumental work for the Association can never be forgotten." Stuart Mosher, a later Editor, revealed nine years later that Frank Duffield had not forgotten the Association, either. In a letter to this writer, in 1951, Mosher told of a visit from the former Editor and a discussion of A.N.A. affairs. Mosher wrote "He is quite deaf and his eyesight is failing fast, however, his memory is remarkably good considering his age . . . I don't know if you ever met him or not but I can tell you that he is a wonderful man." Some three years later, on February 16, 1954, this grand patriarch, whom everyone respected, passed away at the age of eighty-six.

CALL FOR CONVENTION PAPERS

One of the most rewarding experiences to the student of numismatics is the dissemination of his knowledge of the subject, particularly if his study has taken the channel of some special phase or branch of the hobby. Through the written as well as the spoken word we can tell our story of our favorite subject.

Start preparing and writing your story now. All worthwhile papers will be considered by the Editor for possible publication in The Numismatist. After being published in The Numismatist papers are eligible for the Heath Literary awards judging.

Here are the rules:

- 1 - Type your manuscript double-spaced.
- 2 - One side of paper only.
- 3 - Avoid underlining words.
- 4 - Omit "Mr."
- 5 - Give full name of each person mentioned at least once.

In the next issue of The Numismatist the full committee will be listed. Each one will be able to advise you further in the preparation of your papers.

Please send completed manuscript by August 1st to the Chairman at the Philadelphia Electric Company, 900 Sansom Street, Philadelphia 5, Pa. or to Elston G. Bradfield, Editor of The Numismatist. - ROBERT T. FERRIS, Chairman, Papers Committee

CUT COIN IN THE UNITED STATES

By

MENDEL PETERSON, A.N.A. No. 11596

THE practice of cutting coin to supply fractions of the piece is certainly as old as coinage itself. Indeed, the use of the chisel to make change must have been common during the precoinage period when bullion circulated by weight. Since a coin was a definite weight of metal of a guaranteed purity, it was logical to cut the coin for divisions of the unit which the coin represented when such divisions were not coined.

Schrotter¹ mentions finds in Egypt of cut Greek coins. The sacred or semisacred nature of much of the Greek coinage may explain why finds of cut Greek coins are rare. When practiced, it was probably done on the coins of rival States. Also, in the comparatively primitive economics of the Greek States large denomination silver coins served as a medium of exchange for larger transactions while smaller ones in the market place were probably carried on, at least in the earlier period, by barter. With the introduction of smaller bronze coinages the practice of cutting coins would have naturally diminished or have ceased altogether.

The Roman system at the height of its development provided the tiny quadrans and the semis for the transaction of minor market business and the need to create fractions by cutting was apparently not felt. In medieval times the practice of cutting coins is represented by the well-known cut farthings and halfpennies of the English kings² (Plate I).

The practice began in America in Colonial times. The West Indies cut issues are the best known and the most common types are found in the series. From the very first the Colonies of England, France, and the Netherlands in America had depended on Spanish-American silver and gold to supply requirements for hard cash.

Issued in enormous quantities, the Spanish silver piece of eight soon came to dominate the money markets of the world. From the establishment of the first Spanish-American Mints to the middle of the Eighteenth Century the pieces were mostly of crude fabric—the common “cobs,” though some of the earlier emissions compared well with the hammered coins of Europe. In 1732 “milled” pieces, that is, coins produced on the rolling mill, screw punch and screw press, were first struck in Mexico. By the third quarter of the century all of the Spanish-American Mints had been supplied with new machinery and were producing handsome “milled” pieces.

In the West Indies the Governments of the European Colonies had great difficulty in keeping currency in the islands and in supplying the local markets with “hard” money. The introduction of cut money helped to solve both of these problems. The effective mutilation of the Spanish coin made it undesirable for export to the north and the act of cutting and counterstamping provided the small change necessary for local business. Most of these were apparently issued, how-

Throughout the Nineteenth Century the practice of cutting coin

continued in areas other than the West Indies. Almost any numismatic "junkbox" contains examples of such coins. (Plate I) illustrates examples of various cut coin of American origin. The Twentieth Century saw the decline and end of the practice in most areas of the world except the Orient. Here hard money has always been preferred and there is no reason to suppose that the chisel has been abandoned in the more remote areas of southeast Asia (Plate I).

The above coins are more or less familiar to every advanced collector of foreign pieces. Almost unknown, however, is that cut money which circulated within the present limits of the United States. Several finds of cut coins in recent years have shed light on the practice which must have been comparatively common along the eastern seaboard and westward to the Mississippi. The most exciting of these finds have been those made by the United States Park Service around the site of Jamestown and Yorktown, Va. J. Paul Hudson, Museum Curator at Colonial National Historical Park, Jamestown, reports the find of five examples of cut Spanish coin. They were (Plate II): "Spanish coin, one-quarter of a Spanish two real of Philip V struck at Seville (unearthed at Yorktown near Redoubt 10), Spanish coin, one quarter of a Spanish two real of Philip V struck at Seville (unearthed at Yorktown near Redoubt 10); Spanish coin, one half of a Spanish two real of Philip V struck at Seville, dated 17.... (found at Jamestown near the foundations of Structure 6); Spanish coin, probably one half of a two real piece, badly worn (found at Jamestown near foundation of Structure 15)."

In his letter reporting the finds, Hudson expresses the opinion that "the 'clipped' [cut] coins found at Yorktown near Redoubt 10 were not left by Revolutionary War soldiers but by Colonists (or a Colonist) who lived in the vicinity prior to the war." In the same letter, he reported that he had found "a quarter of a Spanish silver 'dollar' near Leedstown, Va." in 1936. Since the finding of these coins, at least two other sites within the boundaries of the eastern United States have yielded cut Spanish or Spanish-American coin.

Lieut. Col. J. Duncan Campbell, who has been conducting exploratory digs at Sackets Harbor, N. Y., reports that a quarter of a Spanish or Spanish-American two real piece was found there two years ago. This area saw much naval and military activity during the War of 1812. Late in the summer of 1960 a transverse quarter of a Spanish-American two real dated 1774 was unearthed at Fort Adams, Miss. by Col. Campbell and Edgar M. Howell. Fort Adams was occupied by United States troops during the period 1799 through 1810. (Plate II).

Further interesting evidence of the circulation of cut money in the Americas was furnished by pieces from a hoard found in Bermuda. This hoard, which unfortunately was dispersed, was supposed to have been dug up on Castle Island in the early 1900s. An enormous quantity of silver, both Spanish and Spanish-American, was reported. The pieces I have examined are predominantly Spanish and cover the period 1711 through 1833. This hoard may have some connection with the last of the piracies committed along the Atlantic coast. In the hoard were at least three examples of cut coin: Half section of a cob real of Potosi dated 1741; quarter section of a Spanish two real of Ferdinand VI, 1746-1759; quarter section of a Spanish-American two real of Charles III, 1759-1788 (Plate II).

Bermuda always had close economic ties with the British Colonies in North America and subsequently with the United States. The finding of these cut pieces in those islands is therefore in the nature of corroborative evidence.

INTERMENT CAMP TOKENS

By

JACK F. BURNS, A.N.A. No. 9944

FROM the time the United States entered World War II until the latter part of 1942 the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the United States Department of Justice provided for the temporary detention of enemy aliens. These aliens were apprehended at the outbreak of the War by the I. and N. Service under enemy alien proceedings pending issuance of final orders on their disposition. When ordered interned, they were transferred to internment camps which at that time were operated by the United States Army.

Early in 1943 it became necessary for the Army to provide internment quarters in the United States for prisoners of war. This resulted in turning over the responsibility for the custody of enemy alien internees to the I. and N. Service. All such internees, totaling 4,120, were then transferred from Army camps to those under the jurisdiction of the I. and N. Service. In addition to enemy aliens apprehended in continental United States this group included those from Puerto Rico, Alaska, the Panama Canal Zone, Hawaii and Pacific islands. It also included those brought from Latin America to the United States for internment and repatriation who had been delivered to the Army. At the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1943, there were 9,220 enemy aliens in the custody of the I. and N. Service. Of this total 5,988 were from the United States and Puerto Rico, 2,349 from Latin America and 883 from Alaska, Hawaii and other Pacific islands. Included in the 5,988 were 428 voluntary internees, i.e., families of interned enemy male adults.

Many tragic situations arose when the heads of families were separated from their families when interned. A decision was reached in November of 1942 to establish family camp facilities, making possible a program of reuniting families. Thereupon, through an arrangement with the Farm Security Administration, a migratory labor camp in southern Texas was made available to the I. and N. Service for this purpose. This camp at Crystal City, which is located approximately 110 miles southwest of San Antonio, had facilities at that time to accommodate seven hundred persons. Its capacity was gradually expanded, and by June 30, 1943, it was capable of housing 2,150 persons; upon completion of construction in progress it was intended to accommodate a total of 3,200 persons. The camp which was used solely for the internment of enemy aliens and their families had a population at the end of the fiscal year 1943 of 1,282 individuals, consisting of 367 men, 358 women and 557 children. The majority were Japanese with a few Germans and others from Latin American countries. A greater total population was reported by June 30, 1944, when the program had been largely completed.

The activities at the Crystal City camp were in many respects similar to those of a typical small town. Every effort was made to make living conditions as normal as possible within the confines of an internment camp. Housing was provided for individual family units where they could prepare their food in accordance with their individual and racial tastes. A grocery store, meat market, canteen and clothing store were set up and operated to provide the necessities of everyday living.

A monetary system, utilizing fiber tokens as a medium of exchange, was instituted to control the distribution and measure the value of the merchandise and subsistence items stocked in the stores. The tokens were allotted to the internees on the basis of the size and composition of their families and were used in exchange for predetermined quantities of food, meat, clothing and the other items which were provided. Thus, the families continued to practice thrift and to engage in household budgetary planning and at the same time had some freedom of choice in purchasing the items which they preferred.

The tokens were used from 1942, at the time of the opening of the camp, until it was closed in February, 1948, at which time the remaining tokens were to have been destroyed. Unfortunately, a copy of the written instructions, which was available while the camp was in operation, could not be located at this time by the officials of the I. and N. Service. Present I. and N. personnel who were directly connected with the operations at Crystal City recall that the tokens were issued in denominations ranging from 1¢ to $5.00 in three colors of fiber—red, green and brown. Notwithstanding this information, the only tokens of this series which have been located to date are of gray fiber in denominations of 1¢, 5¢ and 25¢ and are described as follows:

- 1¢. Gray-colored fiber, round, 17 mm., plain edge.

A.N.A. FEDERAL CHARTER RENEWED

Arkansas Senator John L. McClellan and Representative Wilbur D. Mills early in March introduced similar bills calling for renewal of the American Numismatic Association's Federal Charter with "perpetual succession." Otherwise the Charter remains the same except for a provision that the Board shall have "not less than" five members. The Act passed both houses with ease and has been signed by the President.

NUMISMATICS AND EDUCATION

By

COL. PHARES O. SIGLER, AUS (RET.), A.N.A. No. 9346

Introduction

COIN collecting is dignified by the name of "numismatics," originally defined as the scientific study of coins, medals and seals, but recently broadened to cover all types of money, such as paper currency, tokens, and primitive media of exchange. To the uninitiated the accumulation of coins might appear to be a juvenile activity to be avoided by adults. When noncollectors hear the word "numismatics" they are very likely to think of the present fad of attempting to fill coin boards with current United States coins of various denominations and mint marks. But the hobby is much more extensive. (Incidentally, many of the coin board addicts in time become fine numismatists.)

The pleasure collectors obtain in their hobby is ample justification for this pursuit. However, noncollectors, especially the wives and husbands of the collectors, doubtless wonder why thousands of men and women spend millions of dollars and endless hours of study on their collections. Numismatists blandly reply to criticism of their activities that it is educational and cultural. It may be well to find out what, if any, connection exists between numismatics, arts, science and education.

The famous English essayist, Joseph Addison, in his Dialogues Upon the Usefulness of Ancient Medals, published after his death in 1753, points out that a cabinet of ancient coins (which he refers to as medals) reveals the faces of all the great persons of antiquity, and the customs, triumphs, architecture, manner of dress and spelling, "being a kind of printing before that art was invented." He also observed that coins not only reveal the actions of an Emperor, but at the same time mark out the year that they were performed. He illustrates the affinity between coins and poetry by indicating how Roman coins types explain and illustrate portions of classical poems. Unlike many antiques he said that a coin is in no danger of having its character altered by copies and translators. Of ancient coins he wrote: "The more a man knows of them, the more he deserves to know," a statement with which all numismatists heartily concur. Now let us see the relationship between numismatics and other fields with which education is greatly concerned.

Art

Coins, although small, are original and almost indestructible art objects, untampered with as are many other surviving pieces of art. From their study much may be learned of the abilities of leading artists of many nations. The rise and fall of ancient Greece is reflected in Greek coinage, as are the various local schools of art. The realistic coins of Rome may be compared with the idealistic Greek coins, and a better understanding obtained of the artistic abilities of residents of both countries. The ability to date ancient coins enables scholars to fix the length of various art eras.

Sculpture, to which coin die engraving is closely related, is well illustrated in many devices on coins of ancient Greece, Rome, and other countries. When a statue was erected, or a new temple or other building constructed in ancient times, whether in a city or hamlet, it was a noteworthy event sufficient to be commemorated on local coinage. Roman coins frequently depict new public works of all kinds: temples, monuments, bridges, arches, and other structures. Coin types of Greece reveal temples, numerous statues and other works of art. Although very few of the buildings and objects portrayed survived undamaged to the present, due to earthquakes, natural erosion or destruction in warfare, art students may examine pictures of the original prepared by skilled and artistic engravers. Also, the objects depicted on coins were frequently later altered or entirely rebuilt, and the coin evidence is all that remains to enable one to visualize the original.

Much detailed architectural data is supplied by coins, especially those of Rome, as we have noted. A coin of Severus Alexander issued in 224 A.D. depicts the transformation of a temple built by Elagabalus into a temple of Jupiter Ultor. Another coin by the same ruler struck in 228 A.D. shows a restoration of the local Mint.

Occasionally ancient paintings, which seldom survive, have been used as coin types. The rescue of Andromeda by Perseus on a coin of Dultum in Thrace corresponds in detail with a Pompeian fresco. Painters use coins as a guide to the dress of the ancients; Asitler Raphael nor Rubens neglected this source of assistance in their works.

Statues of the gods and goddesses, however, were more frequent subjects employed by the ancient die engravers. For example, the famous Greek statue, "Victory of Samothrace," erected by Demetrius Poliorcetas in 305 B.C. to celebrate a naval victory, was discovered on the island in 1863. It is now in the Louvre, with wings but without head or arms. Reconstruction of this statue has been made from a Hellenistic coin showing a similar Victory with trumpet in hand. Later, however, in 1948 American archeologists discovered parts of the statue's missing arm and hand. It then became evident that the reconstruction with the trumpet had been erroneous, because the original hand was open and had been empty. The explanation for the difference between the coin and statue in this one detail is simple. The die engraver duplicated the statue exactly, with the exception of the trumpet, and being himself an artist, "improved" upon his subject by adding the trumpet.

From the foregoing it is clear that considerable care must be exercised in weighing numismatic evidence in relation to architecture and copies of art objects. In the former, the architectural order is reliably represented, but many details are sometimes varied. For instance, engravers never show more steps leading to a temple or other building, but sometimes show less. This was probably influenced in some cases by the small space available to them for their reproductions.

The author recently made an intensive study in an attempt to ascertain why the coinage of ancient Greece has never been equalled in artistic excellency. It was discovered that the Greeks inherited from the Mycenaens and other predecessors a very high degree of skill and art in seal engravings. Now a coin die is cut in taglio just as were the ancient seals. Starting with this solid foundation of the perfected skill of die engraving, it is little wonder that the Greeks, by applying their natural artistic touch, could excel the world of their time and of all times and countries thereafter.

Incidentally, modern artists could achieve a real thrill by possessing one of the gold coins of Athens struck at the moment of the final crisis of the Peloponnesian War. The metal for these coins was obtained by melting down the priceless gold statues in the Temple of Athens to relieve the acute monetary shortage. It is regretted that coinage should result in destroying art, but the chances of gold statues surviving the lust of the many invaders of Greece were very slim indeed.

Religion

The Greeks freely employed religious themes on the obverses of their coins, but the Romans usually used the reverse of theirs for this purpose. Many of the devices on the Greek coins alluded to the mythical origins of cities issuing them. Much can be learned of Greek mythology by their study.

The devices on many ancient coins depict religious rites and implements, sacrifices and other events connected with local religions. This sometimes affords valuable information to historians as in the case of the fire altar and attendants appearing for four centuries on the reverse of coins of the Sassanian kings, which indicated adherence to the Zoroastrian faith for that period.

The reconstruction of ritual objects used in the Temple of Jerusalem is very important to archeologists inasmuch as none of these objects has survived. From devices on coins, however, an idea of the shape and design of the originals are preserved. Also, ancient Hebrew and Roman coins confirm the Bible and give it new life. Greek and Roman coins were used to date the recently discovered Dead Sea scrolls.

The bust of Christ on the coins issued by Byzantium, appearing for the first time during the reign of Justinian II, proved the growing strength of the new Christian religion.

Coins of most nations, ancient and modern, frequently supply a clue to the principal religion of the country issuing them, just as our legend "In God We Trust" reveals the Christian faith of the United States. Numerous medals have also been struck, from time to time, to honor religious celebrities and are often of assistance to students of religion.

Ethnology

Until recently most ethnologists exhibited little interest in the primitive money of the many races and tribes studied by them. This may be due to the fact that the functions of such money frequently differ from those of our currency, or the neglect may be due to the difficulty in obtaining necessary information. Some economists (notably Paul Einzig who in 1949 published his excellent book Primitive Money) have recognized the importance of this subject. Mrs. A. Hings-ton Quiggin, in the same year, wrote A Survey of Primitive Money which approached the subject from an ethnological, rather than economic, viewpoint. A few numismatists have also studied unusual media of exchange. The last decade has seen greatly increased interest in this field.

No real attempt has been made to understand the mysterious origin or functions of primitive money until the last few years. It would seem that barter would readily care for all of the needs of primitive men. They had plenty of time and enjoyed the bickering which accompanied barter.

Yet many primitive people in various parts of the world had a currency system of sorts prior to the arrival of the Europeans. Why? Einzig believes that evolution from barter to currency resulted from the desire for prestige which possession of the money gave natives. Mrs. Quiggin's view is that primitive currency arose from two almost universal customs, "gift exchange" and "bride purchase," which led to the designation of certain more or less standard articles to be used as a measure of value. "Gift exchange" is the custom of one native giving a personal belonging to another who desired it, with the implied understanding that when the giver later wanted something in exchange, he would be given it. "Bride purchase" is the custom whereby the bridegroom, or someone representing him, pays compensation in the nature of a dowry to the bride's father as reimbursement for raising her to maturity and for his loss of her future labors.

This author believes that the above views are oversimplifications of a very complicated subject. Doubtless some primitive money, such as the ancient Chinese knife or razor money, had a purely economic background. Many forms of primitive money involved both prestige and were used in gift exchange and bride purchase. A better view appears to be that primitive money was an outgrowth of different conditions and was designed to meet different demands in various parts of the world. At this late date, when most primitive money has been almost entirely replaced by modern currency and much of its history lost to the world, it is doubtful that a single rational and accurate theory may be evolved as to the origin of such diverse types of currencies.

It is important, however, that ethnologists try to solve the puzzle of the origin of primitive money. Their detailed studies, together with those of competent numismatists, may at least attempt to determine the origin of each of the various types of currency. Primitive people, just as more civilized people, cannot be thoroughly understood until one has acquired knowledge of their economic and social background and primitive money forms an important segment of the entire picture of their economic, religious, social and cultural way of life.

Languages

Legends and inscriptions on coins have aided in the quest for lost languages of ancient peoples. In studying any portion of the world's history one soon learns that money has always played an important part in the lives of people having it, and has had considerable influence on their language.

The cattle currency of Rome supplied the Romans with numerous words, many of which have been handed down to us. From the Latin pecus, a herd of cattle, we have "pecuniary" and related words, from capitale, meaning wealth, we have "capital." The word "soldier" originated from the fact that Roman troops were paid with a certain coin, the solidus. Our word "money" (also "monetize" and "monetary") is derived from the Latin moneta, a tribute to the Goddess Juno, because the ancient Roman Mint was believed to have been established in the temple of Juno Moneta. We still use the letter "d" as an abbreviation for pence because that coin was derived from the Roman denarius.

In our language we have several slang words for money which have interesting origins. For example, in Colonial days when tobacco was the principal medium of exchange of Maryland and Virginia it was referred to as "long green," a term still used for money in some sections of our country. Also the word "buck" meaning dollar, had its origin in Ohio and other early settlements where deer skins served as money. "Two bits" and "four bits" originated in the West Indian custom of cutting Spanish dollars into pie-shaped pieces and in cutting segments out of the center of coins. The small pieces so cut were called bits and circulated at a value of 12½ cents per bit.

Many other slang expressions may also be traced to money. "To shell out," meaning to pay, arose from the use of shells for money by many primitive people. "Not worth a continental," meaning worthless, originated from the depreciated Continental paper currency, and "not worth his salt," from the custom of the Romans in giving their soldiers a salt allowance as part of their pay. This practice also gave birth to "salary."

We shall see later the aid that coinage gave to archeologists in discovering the names of Greek sovereigns and their Scythian and Parthian successors. Coins found in that area served as a key to decipher the forgotten language of the former inhabitants because the legends and inscriptions are bilingual, being in one known, and another previously unknown, language. Some Indo-Bactrian coins have legends in both Greek and Kharoshthi script. This led to the first decipherment of Kharoshthi script which enable scholars to read other inscriptions in that language. Before the Babylonian Captivity the Jewish people used the Phoenician alphabet in its pure form, a fact ascertained from Hebrew inscriptions on coins.

We have all observed how spelling has changed in our country since Colonial times. This constant change is a natural one and contemporary spelling and abbreviations as they appear on coins have been very helpful to students of languages.

Economics

Banking, a natural outgrowth of commerce, consisted in its most primitive form of money changing only, but gradually assumed other functions as the need arose. A brief review of the history of banking in ancient times is a necessary introduction to economics as affected by numismatics, and in addition explains the reasons for the innumerable hoards of coins which are recovered from time to time.

AN INTRODUCTION TO COIN COLLECTING

Fourteen years ago a Publications Committee of the American Numismatic Association compiled a thirty-two page booklet entitled An Introduction to Coin Collecting, reprinted from articles that first appeared in The Numismatist of March, April and May, 1948. The Preface, in part, stated:

"This booklet concerns itself with a sizable group whose sole coin collecting experience, for example, has been confined to collecting all dates and mintmarks of Lincoln cents, and now wish to learn more about the hobby but are not quite sure how to go about it. To clear up any imagined mysteries about the study and collecting of coins, tokens, paper money or medals, certain well known American numismatic authorities have contributed instructive articles concerning their specialties.

"This booklet alone cannot make a numismatist of a novice, but the contributors offer a guiding hand to anyone who is interested in further knowledge of the subject, for this booklet is designed to serve as a brief introduction to the most interesting of all hobbies. The beginner will gain many valuable hints about what to collect, how to buy at retail and at auctions with important do's and don'ts, methods of cataloging a collection, how to judge the condition of a coin and to appreciate its style and color. The list of useful numismatic terms may prove to be one of the most valuable features of this volume. The meanings of heretofore strange names and terms will be especially useful to the new collector. An interesting article tells how coins are made; others tell about Colonial coins, both British and Spanish-American, regular United States Mint issues, commemorative coins, private gold, paper money, tokens, ancient coins and other related topics."

This pamphlet was very popular but has been out of print for some time. This is a tribute to the first Publications Committee and its authors, much of whose work is as fresh and useful today as when written.

Now, after months of work by a new group of contributors, the old edition has been reviewed, its contents revised or rewritten, and a substantial number of new articles added. After publication in The Numismatist, beginning in the May, 1962, number, the series will be reprinted in a forty-eight page booklet. It is hoped the new presentation will be of benefit to all collectors, and to novices in particular.

The current contributors panel is headed by Glenn B. Smedley, who has coordinated the program. Editor is Elston G. Bradfield. Contributors are P. K. Anderson, Bradfield, Kenneth E. Bressett, Ted V. Buttrey, William L. Clark, Alan D. Craig, James J. Curto, Dr. John S. Davenport, O. H. Dodson, Herbert J. Erlanger, J. Douglas Ferguson, Dr. J. Hewitt Judd, Dr. John F. Lhotka, John J. Pittman, Lewis M. Reagan, Col. Phares O. Sigler, Arthur Sipe, Smedley and Richard S. Yeoman.

WHAT TO COLLECT

S. Mosher, rev. by A. Sipe

CONTRARY to the suggestion the title of this chapter might convey, we will not advise you what to collect. Rather I will tell about the various coins in which many collectors specialize so that you may decide for yourself. It would seem that all humans have the instinct to collect things. That coins should be the objective of a certain proportion of the population is not unusual. At one time or another most persons have formed what might be called a coin collection. They begin by saving different dates or mintmarks of coins they find in circulation. Perhaps they get a hundred or so pieces. This is a start but often our embryonic collector returns his "collection" to circulation. If he should pass beyond this stage he usually becomes a confirmed collector of coins.

A seemingly natural inclination is for a collector to want a coin from each different country. At this stage he is well on the way to becoming a general collector. But before he completes such a collection he will probably become side-tracked. As his collection grows he will become particularly interested in certain kinds of coins. Perhaps it will be coins bearing portraits of famous persons, historical coins, or coins showing famous buildings, animals, coats of arms or innumerable other types that may catch his fancy. Such possibilities for expansion in various fields will both delight and appall him, for after all the average man has just so much time and money to spend on his hobby.

Starting a Collection

There is no "best way" to start a coin collection. But there are certain pitfalls to avoid and if you succeed in detouring those mentioned here you will not go far wrong.

We will suppose that you have decided to specialize in one or more series of coins, or even that you are going to collect all kinds of coins. Before you spend your hard earned money resolve never to buy a coin unless you know exactly what it is, its approximate market value and the reliability of the person who is selling it. Secondly, don't buy a coin just because it appears to be a bargain. In all probability it isn't a bargain anyway and unless it fits into your collection it is of no use to you.

The want list is one of the most useful and yet one of the most abused facilities at the disposal of collectors. The collector with an orderly mind may compile a list of coins he wants and use it as a sort of shopping list. Or he may send it along to a dealer requesting him to "quote" on such items as he has in stock. So far, this is a satisfactory method of buying coins, both to the collector and dealer.

Buying at Retail

But the want list becomes an item of high nuisance value when it is used by the bargain hunting collector. Often he will go as far as having it duplicated and sent to many dealers. His purpose is not to locate the coins he needs as much as it is to obtain such coins at the lowest possible price. Now this may be "good business" or "astute buying" or whatever you want to call it, but it invariably puts the collector in an unfavorable position.

After a dealer receives this want list, he may spend time going over his stock and reporting on such coins as he can supply. Usually he will put such coins aside until he has heard further from the collector. Other dealers who have received the same want list will do the best they can with it and then send a want list of the pieces they cannot supply to other dealers. Shortly, they will receive similar requests from fellow dealers and then they realize that they are wasting their time. If the coins listed are rare or unusual ones, the dealer most likely to have them in stock will receive the most requests for a quotation on them. Even if the coins are hard to get rather than high priced he can take advantage of this sudden "demand" and quote a stiff price on them.

Now it is time to pay a little attention to the collector who probably has no idea of the time and effort that is being given to his want list. The common pieces are reported on at various prices and conditions. The coins he wants the most are, for the very reason we have described, quoted by all dealers at a much higher price than he would be asked to pay if he had not swamped the dealers with his want list. If the collector persists in this indiscriminate manner, he will soon become unpopular with dealers and his want lists consigned with much haste to the wastepaper baskets.

Buying at Auction or Mail Bid Sales

Many dealers who conduct auction or mail bid sales will send you catalogs free if you request them to do so. Such sales provide many opportunities to add to your collection and it is essential that you understand how such sales are conducted. Buying at auction is an art in itself and, while we are about to consider it with some particularity, you will need actual experience before you become entirely familiar with the proper procedure.

Auctions are subject to certain regulations and requirements, according to the laws of the states in which they are held. Mail bid sales are ostensibly operated under the same rules as auction sales, except that all bids are received by mail.

Dealers invariably state the "conditions of sale" in the front pages of their catalogs. Before submitting your bids it is well to read these conditions with much care. By doing so you may avoid misunderstandings as well as trouble and expense.

The first consideration is the reliability of the dealer conducting the sale. The coin business, like all other businesses, has its honest and dishonest operators and don't let anyone tell you otherwise. So before you offer any sizable bids you should have good reason for believing they will be executed in good faith and that the lots you bid on will be as described in the catalog.

For the purpose of illustration we will suppose you have received an auction catalog from an established, reliable dealer and that there are coins in the sale you would like to buy. If you are not quite sure what to bid, write the dealer, requesting an estimate on each lot in which you are interested. The dealer, if he knows his business at all, will be able to give you a fairly accurate idea of what each lot will bring. In all probability he knows what the coins cost the owner as well as the current market for such pieces. The values he suggests are, however, flexible and incur no obligation on his part.

Now that you have the cataloger's opinion you can regulate your bidding to suit your own judgment. In the beginning it is best to be cautious and underbid rather than overbid. A comparison of the estimates with the list of prices realized will reveal any gross inconsistencies.

Perhaps it would be well to discuss the cataloger's position before going further into this matter. Assume that he makes his living selling coins at retail and at auction. If he does, his lot is not altogether any easy one. In fact it is doubtful if any other type of businessman has to put up with such a variety of nuisances.

The coins he has cataloged may belong to an estate and he is merely acting as an agent. He has agreed to pay the costs of the sale, including cataloging, illustrating, printing, advertising, mailing and the auctioneer's fee and in return he is to get a percentage of the gross amount realized. Not every sale is a financial success to the cataloger. A miscalculation in costs, the mistakes of a few important bidders, an inopportune date of sale or other unforeseen happenings may cause a heavy loss. The experienced cataloger is aware that it costs more to sell some kinds of coins than it does others and will see to it that his sales fee is in proportion. Some catalogers set a minimum bid, representing the cataloging cost, on each lot. Now that you know a little about the difficulties besetting the dealer you will be better able to cooperate with him.

Important Don'ts for Bidders

Important don'ts for bidders are: Don't send in your bid sheet without fully understanding the "terms of sale" as stated in the catalog. Don't bid on a coin unless you are sure you want it. Don't bid on a coin unless you are familiar with its value. Don't bid on rarities unless you are certain they are genuine. If you are at all dubious regarding the cataloger's knowledge, have the coins examined by an authority before you bid. Afterwards it may be too late. Don't send in unlimited bids unless you are prepared to pay "unlimited" prices. Don't send in ridiculously low bids (less than exchange or melting value.) Such bids may cause your name to be removed from the cataloger's mailing list. Don't submit bids without first establishing credit with the cataloger. This is important. He is handling coins belonging to someone else and he cannot send them to strangers without first receiving security. Send him a good business reference or, better still, a letter of introduction from your banker or employer. Your number in a coin collecting organization is not a business reference. If you neglect to supply references do not feel offended when the dealer asks for them, or for payment before he ships the coins.

Don't send a "too hasty" letter if a small mistake is made in executing your bids. Most dealers are ready to make satisfactory adjustment although it may take a little time. Errors will occur for the dealer has to record thousands of bids, allot thousands of coins to hundreds of buyers and ship and bill the coins within a very limited time.

Attending an auction in person and executing your own bids is more satisfactory than bidding by mail. It is a lot more pleasurable, too. You can inspect the coins in which you are interested, mark the limit you are prepared to pay opposite each lot in the catalog and then enter the competition. You will learn much by watching the more experienced bidders. In particular you will learn that they rarely become annoyed when they are out-bid. They know that other auction sales will come along and that it sometimes pays to wait.

Beware of unscrupulous practices such as overstatement in regard to condition, rarity and value, substitu-the unwary bidder. If you are successful in getting a considerable number of lots and if they are billed at the full extent of your bids you have reason to suspect that the sale was not conducted properly.

An honest dealer will award you a lot at a slight increase over the next highest bid. Thus, if you bid $2.50 on a coin and the nearest bid was $2.20 you may be awarded the coin for $2.30. It sometimes happens that bidding is very close and it is impossible to save money for you. Very often the cataloger will receive identical bids on a lot. In such instances the first bid received takes the coin. You should soon discover for yourself if your bids are executed fairly.

In Europe and the United States auctions of coins are held frequently. You may bid at such sales by attending in person, entrusting your bids to an agent or sending your bids by mail to be executed by the cataloger. Naturally, most collectors buy their coins by the latter method. At an average sale conducted by an established firm many bid-sheets are received. From observing a large number of important and unimportant sales over a considerable period of time I find a large number of the lots are "sold to order" or, as the term implies, to bidders who have sent their bids by mail.

Selling a Collection at Auction

A brief outline of selling at auction may be of interest at this point. A collector decides to dispose of his collection and places it in the hands of a dealer who he believes will realize the best price on it. The dealer charges a certain percentage of the gross amount realized. While this percentage may vary according to the value or type of the collection being sold, it is usually around twenty per cent. If the dealer has to put out an expensive illustrated catalog the percentage may be more. Then too, a dealer cannot afford to handle miscellaneous lots for the same percentage as he can handle an extensive series of worthwhile material. No dealer is under any obligation to accept coins to be sold.

It is not unusual for a collector to think he can ship coins to a dealer "for sale in his next auction" without previous correspondence. Successful dealers have their sales planned for months ahead. To do this they must have a fairly good idea of just what the market can absorb, and of the

tion of inferior coins for the original ones, fake sales (buying in coins at fictitious prices), set up sales wherein miscellaneous lots are offered as "the important collection of Mr. So and So," offering coins with strings to them or using house bidders to run up most opportune time to offer particular items.

After the dealer has the catalog ready he mails it, usually several weeks in advance, to collectors on his mailing list. Important sales are sometimes publicized months in advance.

Cataloging Your Collection

Perhaps the easiest and most useful form of catalog of your collection is a "continuous" or "running" ledger. This can be elaborated upon by a loose leaf or card index system but the diary system should form the basis of any kind of catalog.

As each coin is added to your collection it is recorded in your ledger according to date of purchase. It can be given a number and it is well to record the source, purchase price, and a brief description of the coin such as country, date, denomination, metal, condition and pedigree, providing of course, the latter is obtainable. Such a record will be invaluable if any or all of your coins are lost or stolen, if your collection is disposed of or if it is necessary to have it appraised for purposes of taxation. It also may prove useful if the genuineness of any of your coins become a matter of doubt or if their true ownership is questioned.

Along with this ledger system you can devise supplementary methods of cataloging your collection — alphabetical, geographical and chronological being among the most readily adaptable. Using a loose leaf notebook or card index system a complete record can be kept of each coin. A rubbing or photograph can also be included as well as such historical information as may seem of importance and interest. Printed 3 by 5 inch index cards add much to the pleasure of cataloging as well as to the neatness of the catalog.

Coin Condition

There are certain coins that are unobtainable in perfect condition, yet because of their historical importance they are in demand and worthy of a place in any collection. This is especially true of coins struck during medieval times and even as late as the beginning of the Nineteenth Century. The fault with many such coins seems to be in the preparation of the dies and planchets and in the striking. Many early English and American pieces are found weakly struck on irregular planchets, yet they are highly desirable.

Style and Striking of a Coin

The "style" and "striking" of a coin is of primary interest to those who collect ancient coins. The "style" refers to the artistic merits of the design, the "striking" to the mechanical accuracy with which it was struck. Fine style and careful striking are not necessarily associated. In fact it is a peculiar circumstance that we often find coins of the finest style wretchedly struck and coins of the most atrocious style struck with meticulous care. Fine style may refer to the output of a skilled artist as distinguished from the work of his less skilled contemporaries, or to coins struck when artistic coins were the rule and not the exception. Coins of the latter class are referred to as the "finest period" rather than as the "finest style."

A coin having a design that is well centered and showing sharp, even impressions of the dies may be considered well struck. But the term must be used cautiously. A wornout die might produce a nicely centered design but not a well struck one.

Another desirable quality in an ancient coin is high relief. A coin of fine style and high relief is more desirable when struck on a wide planchet. And it is still more desirable when it is toned.

Color of a Coin

As with pottery, gems, tapestries, stamps and other collector's items, the color of a coin has much to do with its desirability. This is particularly true in regard to copper coins. With silver coins color is of much less importance and with gold coins of none at all.

A copper or bronze coin rarely retains its original mint color for any length of time. The surface of ancient coins acquires a film or encrustation known as patina. This patina may vary in color being either black, brown, red, blue, green or a combination of such colors. Patina is caused by oxidation and the color depends upon the chemical nature of the soil, air, or moisture with which the coin came in contact.

It is the aim of many present day collectors to form "matched sets" of coins. Thus they will attempt to make a collection of Indian head cents from 1864 to 1909 having the identical color. As far as I know this has never been accomplished as the original color of small cents is never uniform. Show me a matched set of Indian head or Lincoln cents and I'll show you a set that has been dipped and colored artificially.

Silver coins may vary in color from their original brilliance to a heavy dull tarnish. Until recent years collectors preferred silver coins having what can best be described as a light steel-blue tone. A few of the old-timers still prefer it but many new collectors insist that the coins they buy have "original brilliance." This is a curious attitude and one that is causing much rubbing and scrubbing by coin dealers over-anxious to please their customers.

Badly tarnished silver coins can be cleaned safely by a variety of methods providing it is done by an expert. Once the dirt and tarnish is removed it is advisable to let the coins acquire a natural tone. This can be done by exposing them to sunlight, being careful to give equal exposure to both sides. Frequent wiping with a clean piece of soft flannel will promote and preserve an even, pleasant tone.

We know of collectors who clean and lacquer their silver coins. The merits of this method can best be appreciated by those who house their collections in shallow trays or cabinets. Lacquer is not injurious to silver and we have seen coins that were lacquered forty years ago that appeared to be coined but yesterday. But again, cleaning and lacquering must be done in an expert fashion, otherwise damage will result.

There are collectors who object to lacquered coins and dealers handling such should always state that they have been treated in such a manner. Lacquer can be removed easily with acetone without damage to the coin.

Classification of Condition

The classification of condition is a perennial topic for collectors and dealers alike. Their aim is to improve upon existing methods and to establish a workable system that will be accepted by the entire coin collecting fraternity.

So far no one has devised such a system. It is not possible to apply the same system to all coins. Most of the terms in current use mean little or nothing when standing alone. Take for example the term "uncirculated," and apply it to a group of coins including a Greek tetradrachm, a Roman bronze, a medieval denier, a Pine Tree shilling, a copper cent of 1793, a silver dollar of 1794 and a quarter dollar of 1921. Each of these coins might be "strictly uncirculated" yet supplementary terms are needed to describe them accurately.

Large cent of 1794 Liberty Cap

It is unfortunate for both the dealer and the collector that there are no hard and fast rules by which to grade the condition of a coin. Various systems have been designed, some of which have not been without merit, but the insurmountable factor of personal opinion will never permit everyone to see eye-to-eye in deciding the comparative merits of each coin. This difference is of small importance if you buy your coins from dependable catalogers who have experience, integrity and good eyesight.

Though the adjectives used in describing condition are familiar ones it may startle the beginner to learn that a coin classified as "very good" is actually worn considerably. "Uncirculated" is another confusing term. In its proper sense it means a coin that has not been circulated. Yet any coin that is free from signs of wear is called "uncirculated."

Terms Used in Classifying Condition

For the sake of clarity these terms of condition are arranged in order of merit:

PROOF (PR.) — A coin with a mirror-like surface struck with polished dies on a polished planchet for coin collectors. Usually sold at a premium by the mints.

UNCIRCULATED (UNC.) — In perfect condition showing no signs of wear or damage but not necessarily brilliant. Sometimes known as MINT STATE.

EXTREMELY FINE (EX. F.) — No definite signs of wear but having a less desirable surface than an uncirculated coin.

VERY FINE (V. F.) — Showing inconsequential signs of wear but only slightly less desirable than the preceding classification.

FINE (F.) — Perceptible signs of wear but still a desirable piece.

VERY GOOD (v. g.) — Definite signs of wear but not altogether unattractive.

GOOD (g.) — Worn but lettering and design all clear.

FAIR (fr.) — Quite badly worn and usually undesirable.

POOR (p.) — Less desirable than FAIR yet the design can usually be distinguished.

Supplementary Terms

There are certain coins that cannot be graded according to the above terms. While they present no difficulty to the experienced collector the beginner may find it difficult to describe them. Every so often we find an ill-advised cataloger describing a coin as "uncirculated, was a proof." Such a coin can be properly described as an "impaired proof," or better still it would be well for the cataloger to state the exact damage.

Any coin that is noticeably damaged by scratches, nicks, dents, abrasions, ought to be cataloged so. Such terms as "superb," "perfect" and "gem" are sometimes used and are self-explanatory.

Occasionally enthusiastic catalogers wax eloquent and describe coins as "beautiful," "wonderful," and "lovely," but the use of such endearing terms in a coin catalog appears to us as being out of place.

Historical Coins

The collector of historical coins will never experience that feeling of inadequacy and frustration that often catches up with the collector of dates. He need never sit staring at a blank hole in an album that is quite beyond his pocketbook to fill. Historical coins afford a never ending source of instruction and entertainment. Any coin that is associated with an interesting event or personage of the past is, generally speaking, a historical coin. The field is a wide one extending back to the beginning of coinage and covering a wide geographical area. It offers the collector an almost unlimited choice of subjects, for coins portray, to a remarkable extent, the history of all phases of civilization.

We do not propose to give a detailed list of historical coins. Such a compilation would be more or less arbitrary and is better left to the judgment of the collector. The general field of historical coins overlaps most specialized series. It can, however, be narrowed into a more or less specific field to suit the fancy of a collector. This does not mean that such a collection can be confined to a definite era or place; but rather that the collector himself may determine the historical merits of each coin.

The plan for such a collection can be drawn up by making a list of the coins that have played an important part in the history, commerce and literature of the world. It will be found that many of them can be bought for small sums. The gold denominations, which include such famous pieces as the doubloon, joe, daric, ducat, louis d'or, pistole, aureus, carolin, guinea, mohur, noble, ryder, solidus, sovereign, zecchino, sesquin, angel, eagle, and others will represent a considerable investment. However, common types in fine condition can be bought for a reasonable sum and the purchase of them offers a method of saving money that requires little effort.

The silver denominations are every bit as interesting and not nearly so expensive. The asper, cistophorus, crown, denier, denarius, ecu, florin, gulden, lira, mark, pistareen, real rouble, schilling, teston, yen, and zloty are denominations that can be acquired by the most modest purse.

The famous denominations to be found among coins issued in the less valuable metals should not be overlooked. The lepton (plural lepta) or Widow's Mite is a small copper coin of Biblical fame. The anna of Hindustan, the cash of China, the denga of Russia, the sen of Japan, the farthing of England, are denominations of small intrinsic value and obtainable for very little.

ALTHOUGH many different metals have been used at one time or another and in different countries in the manufacture of coins, the commonest are gold, silver, copper, tin and zinc. All of our modern coins are mixtures or alloys of one or more metals to make them stronger and more lasting. For example, our gold coins were 90% gold and 10% copper and silver; our silver coins 90% silver and 10% copper; the nickel coins 25% nickel and 75% copper; and the copper coins 95% copper and 5% tin and zinc. The pure metals are weighed carefully and mixed in the prescribed proportions by melting them together at a high temperature to form a new alloy. This is cast into ingots and then annealed by reheating followed by immersion in cold water. Annealing is for the purpose of softening the metal and making it less brittle.

The ingots are next passed through a series of breakdown and finishing rollers which reduce them to a ribbon of metal, the exact thickness required for the coins. These ribbons are now run through a blanking machine to punch out circular discs or blanks usually called planchets. These in turn are fed into an upsetting machine to form the raised edge which appears around our coins. All this work has hardened the metal which must again be annealed as before, and then, after a cleansing in acid, the coin blank is ready for striking.

The design of the coin and the fabrication of the dies for striking it are the next point for consideration. The design is the first step and this is sometimes created by the Mint engraver and sometimes by artists, in public competition, who model their ideas in clay on a large scale. Full sized copper electrotypes are made of both obverse and reverse from plaster casts of the accepted design. From these electrotypes the design is mechanically reduced by a reducing machine which cuts an exact mathematically-reduced reproduction of the model on the end of a steel bar called a hub. This hub, which is first hardened, is pressed into the end of another steel bar to make the dies with the design reversed and incuse. Many dies can be made from one hub.

The dies are then locked in place in an electrically operated automatic coin press into which the blanks are poured through a feeding funnel and down a cylinder where they are grasped one at a time by the finger-like pincers of a moving arm which holds a blank firmly in place while the obverse and reverse dies are driven simultaneously against it. The force of this striking is sufficiently hard to cause the metal to flow into every minute depression of the dies with one blow.

A collar or ring on the coining press confines the blank while it is being struck and controls the lateral flow of the metal insuring that the coin will be perfectly round. The collar may be plain, reeded or engraved. It is this collar which impresses the edge design or reeding on the coin. Ancient coins were struck without benefit of a collar and for this reason coins of ancient Greece in particular lack the perfect symmetry or roundness of modern coins. The completed coin then drops into a receptacle, the pincers grasp another blank. The process repeats.

There are at present two Mints operating in the United States. The Philadelphia Mint, established in 1792, is still operating and has used a mintmark only once. This was on the silver composition five cent piece struck from 1942 to 1945, when a P was placed over the dome of Monticello. During these four years the marks of the three Mints then operating were conspicuously displayed on the five cent piece to facilitate sorting the nickel composition coin from the silver. The San Francisco Mint opened in 1854 with the mintmark S and closed in 1955. The Denver Mint began in 1906, mintmark D.

Other Mints were established in Charlotte, N. C., with the mintmark C and at Dahlonega, Ga., with the mintmark D. These Mints coined gold only, from 1838 to 1861. The New Orleans Mint operated with the mintmark O from 1838 to 1861 and 1879 to 1909 and the Carson City, Nev., Mint, mintmark CC, 1870 to 1893.

MEDAL collecting has for a long time been a legitimate and fascinating branch of numismatics, commanding the exclusive interest of some collectors while others collect medals along with coins and other numismatic items. In fact the interest in medal collecting, especially in commemoratives, has recently increased considerably in the United States.

When we speak of medals in this connection we do not mean military or other decorations or awards but rather numismatic items of either historical or artistic significance. A precise definition of the medal is hard to give, but it differs from coins by its purpose which is not that of a circulating medium and from tokens by its more substantial nature and more artistic execution.

The medallions occasionally struck under the Roman Empire may be regarded as the forerunners of the modern medal. There were isolated medallic items during the Middle Ages, but the origin of the modern medal is generally accepted as having occurred during the Italian Renaissance, the first medal having been issued in 1438. It was executed by the famous artist Antonio Pisanello on the occasion of the arrival in Italy of the Byzantine Emperor Johannes Palaeologos.

The earlier medals were mostly cast, but by the Seventeenth Century the striking of medals from engraved dies had become the general rule. Since the second quarter of the Nineteenth Century most medals have been struck from mechanically produced dies, although there are still examples of cast medals in the present.

Medals vary greatly in size and shape. Though they are mostly round, they also come square, rectangular, octagonal and otherwise. Medals that are not round are often called plaques or plaquettes. The size, which until the middle of the Nineteenth Century rarely exceeded two inches in diameter, is now frequently much larger, but there are also medalets which are as small as a fraction of an inch in diameter.

Medal collecting is so fascinating because the scope and number of pieces available to the collector is almost infinite. Broadly speaking medals can be subdivided into those on historical events (in the widest sense of the word), those on individuals (portrait medals) and those of a purely artistic nature. Collections can be built up entirely to suit the taste and the interests of the individual collector and afford an unlimited opportunity for historical, genealogical and artistic study and research. New, unexpected and fascinating information is met at every step.

It is impossible within this brief comment on the subject to give an adequate idea of the magnitude of the field—both in point of view of time and of famous artists. Fortunately the literature on medals of all times and topics is extremely rich and a study of the library list of the A.N.A. will disclose to the interested collector many books which will open to him an entirely new interest in the branch of numismatics known as medal collecting.

As a sample of the works and some of the topics available to the collector, let us refer to the book by Betts on medals on American history or that by the Marquis of Milford-Haven on naval medals or those by Hennin and Bramsen on the medals of the French Revolution and Napoleon I or that by Zepernik on medals of universities or the Brettauer catalog on medals connected with all aspects of medicine or the Eidlitz collection catalog on architects' medals or the pax in Nummis catalog of the Le Maistre collection of peace medals. And when it comes to information on artists there is the Forrer dictionary. For contemporary medals, finally, attention may be directed to the catalog of the International Exhibition of Contemporary Medals held in the Museum of the American Numismatic Society in New York in 1910 which lists more than two thousand items by nearly two hundred artists on which biographical notes are given.

Fortunately medals, especially Nineteenth and Twentieth Century issues are comparatively inexpensive, so that the cost of acquiring a fair collection is quite reasonable, and as each specimen is acquired the collector should make himself familiar with the occasion responsible for the medal and the career of the artist.

THE first United States Mint was erected in Philadelphia and the first issues were struck late in 1792, dimes and half dimes made from Washington's own silver plate. Cents and half cents exclusively were coined in 1793, but in such small quantities as to be inadequate for the requirements of trade. Small denomination coins of the states and foreign countries continued in use even after the turn of the century. Silver and gold coins in those early years were lost to American trade channels owing to the fact that most of them were exported or melted. After 1800 few gold coins or silver dollars were seen in general circulation. Coinage of the silver dollar was suspended in 1803 along with the eagle, or ten-dollar gold piece. The half dollar served as the principal silver coin for large transactions moving from bank to bank.

There was only a negligible coinage of quarters, dimes and half dimes from 1794 to 1834. Scarcity of small change brought about the use of bank notes put out by banks and underweight foreign coins of many varieties. The Jackson tokens, similar in size to the large cents soon covered the country. These were known as "Hard Times" tokens.

The California gold discovery was responsible for an interesting series of private, state, and territorial gold issues in the Western states. The privately struck gold coins of Templeton Reid and the Bechtlers in Georgia and Carolinas were circulated in the southeastern section of the United States a few years earlier.

The private gold issues were necessary pieces. F. D. Kohler as state assayer was authorized to stamp ingots with their weight, fineness and value. Moffat & Co., private assayers, issued similar gold bars which served as coinage for a brief period. Moffat coined pieces somewhat similar to regular United States coins, from 1849 to 1853. They were associated with United States assayer August Humbert and at one time or another they issued their coins in denominations of five, ten, twenty and fifty dollars. Their pieces were of full weight and were accepted at face value.

Other private coiners of the period include Norris, Grieg and Norris who struck a half eagle in 1849; Cincinnati Mining and Trading Co., who produced five and ten dollar pieces and planned a twenty dollar piece, all with the head of an Indian on the obverse; the Miner's Bank, which put out a ten dollar piece; J. S. Ormsby who minted both five and ten dollar coins with the initials J. S. O.; the Pacific Co. whose coins were probably hand-struck and were issued in denominations of five and ten dollars and patterns of one and two and a half dollars in silver and tin. Dubosq & Co., former Philadelphia jewelers, made five and ten dollar coins and a two and a half dollar trial piece in copper. Baldwin made five, ten and the first California twenty dollar pieces, all of which were under weight. Shultz & Co., and Dunbar and Co. produced five dollar pieces in 1851. Wass Molitor & Co., made five, ten, twenty and fifty dollar pieces from 1852 until 1855, and Kellogg & Co., came out with twenty and fifty dollar coins in 1854 and 1855.

Privately struck coins were circulated in other Western areas as well. The beaver coins of Oregon of both five and ten dollar denominations have an interesting background. The Mormon gold pieces minted at Salt Lake City in 1849 and 1860 in various denominations from two and a half to twenty dollars are among the interesting specimens in the pioneer series.

Colorado claims several gold coin series particularly those struck by Clark Gruber & Co. in the years 1860 and 1861 at Denver. Denominations struck included two and a half, five, ten and twenty dollars. Other Colorado coiners were John Parsons and Co., Tarryall Mines, two and a half and five dollar pieces; J. J. Conway & Co., two and a half, five and ten dollar specimens coined in 1861. All private gold issues are rare, and their history offers one of the most absorbing chapters of United States monetary history.

The regular gold coin issues of one dollar and twenty dollars were brought out in 1849. The new three cent postage rate brought about the coinage of the silver three cent piece in 1851. In 1853 the three dollar gold piece was authorized and was issued regularly without change of type until 1889.

In 1853 the weights of all silver pieces except the dollar were reduced. Arrowheads were placed on each side of the dates to indicate the change during this and the following two years.

The law of 1857 brought about a reform of the copper coinage. The new small cents were coined, at first with the eagle device and in 1859 with the Indian head. The issues of 1857 to 1864 were known as "white cents" after which the proportion of copper was increased and the total weight reduced to bring about the bronze cents which we have had ever since, with the exception of the war year 1943 when our cents were composed of zinc coated steel, and 1944 and 1945 when the "shell case" composition was employed. The law of 1857 abolished the half cent, and certain foreign coins as legal tender in the United States.

The Civil War brought about a small coin emergency and resort was soon made to fractional currency, postage currency, encased postage stamps, tokens of one cent size and greenbacks. In 1864 the two cent piece was introduced. It was the first coin to bear the motto IN GOD WE TRUST. It was minted for nine years. A nickel three cent piece was added to the family of coins in 1865 to redeem many three cent currency notes issued earlier that year. The nickel five cent piece was struck for the first time in 1866 and soon crowded the half dime from popularity.

A general revision of coinage laws in 1873 resulted in a trade dollar for use in the Orient, and a temporary halting of coinage of the regular silver dollar. In 1878, however, the Morgan dollar was issued, and for many succeeding years great quantities were minted. An Act of February 19, 1887 provided for redemption of trade dollars for six months, after which they were to be worth their metal value only. This is the only piece of United States money ever to be demonetized.

The brief coinage of the twenty cent piece from 1875 to 1878 was merely an experiment. The public complained about its similarity to the quarter which spelled its early demise.

No important legislation governing coinage other than commemorative coinage, has been enacted since 1879.

The Act of Sept. 26, 1890 governs the changes of designs in all denominations and forbids such changes unless the designs were in existence for twenty-five years, except by special Congressional action.

In 1933 an order was issued by the President prohibiting the hoarding of gold coins. The collectors of coins within certain prescribed limits are excepted from the provisions, thus enabling the numismatists of America to preserve the finest of all United States Mint issues. No coins of greater denomination than fifty cents have been issued since 1935.

Following is a simple outline of coin types found in the United States series dating from the establishment of the Mint. Major varieties have been included. Lack of space does not permit detailed description, but the captions following the dates in this list will serve as adequate identification for almost every type and variety. There are a number of good books available at low prices which give complete type and variety information. Any coin dealer or the A.N.A. Librarian will be pleased to assist you.

Since the days of the Greeks and the Romans, coins have served as a record of important events and persons. Modern nations, including our own, have continued this practice. United States commemorative coins were first minted in 1892 on the occasion of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago. By 1951, silver commemorative half dollars totaled forty-eight types, many of which were minted in various years and at more than one mint. Eleven types of commemorative gold pieces were struck from 1903 to 1926. The Isabella quarter of 1893 and the Lafayette dollar of 1900 are included in the commemorative series.

THE science of numismatics embraces not only coins, medals and paper money but also tokens of every conceivable nature. A token is briefly defined in dictionaries as an emergency coinage or as a substitute for money. In numismatics, its use extends considerably beyond this definition.

It is used to describe all of the miscellaneous private issues struck from dies on almost any substance and for many purposes other than as a substitute for money. The substances may be metallic, hard rubber or vulcanite, celluloid, plastic or fibrous, etc. The other purposes could be for political, fraternal, religious, historical, commemorative, promotional or other reasons and even as luck or love charms. The line between tokens and medals can be quite fine and at times indistinguishable.

Because of the varied uses for which tokens were struck in the United States, they portray more clearly, precisely and thoroughly than any other numismatic medium, the history and life of the people of our country. It is those tokens with historical significance and background which greatly add to the enjoyment of the collector numismatist.

Certain historical series such as those of Washington, Lincoln, the Civil War, the Politicals and the Hard Times tokens, etc., have for a long time commanded considerable attention, and a certain amount of research and study has been made in their behalf.

So little has been done in other American series that slight reflection will show what possibilities for enjoyment and discovery are open to the collector who will undertake a little research for the stories of historic interest, generally found closely related to ever so many of the tokens. The American series goes back to 1789, prior to the days of our first coinage in 1793, and extends to the present.

The satisfaction and interest derived by a collector in obtaining additional varieties of quaint design, types of metal, and different origins is manifested to the highest degree in tokens, for no branch of numismatics offers such a vast amount of such diversified materials. To give an idea of the extent of such diversity, tokens relating to Washington or Lincoln can be collected from literally many hundreds of different issues, such as store cards, counters, jetons, trade checks, Civil War coppers, etc., and in many instances in a variety of different metals.

A source of information is in the files of The Numismatist and other coin magazines. Interest in tokens was intense in the last century and in the early years of our own. Auction catalogs of those times featured tokens to a large extent and high prices were prevalent, even compared to our present day prices in many instances. Those catalogs therefore are a valuable source of information in determining the identification and rarity of many tokens. After a lapse of some fifty years, interest in tokens is again increasing as evidenced by the research being done and by the number of pamphlets, books and even reprints of old books, now being published.

The most popular series of U. S. tokens follow:

Hard Times tokens are those attributed to the financial panic of 1837. Many are political in nature because of the issues involved pertaining to banking policies, regulations and rights. Jackson, Seward, Webster and Van Buren were the political figures most closely associated in these controversies. Many tokens express idioms of the period relating to the financial problems such as EXPERIMENTAL CURRENCY, EXECUTIVE FINANCERING, VAN BUREN METALLIC CURRENCY, etc.

Other pieces which passed as currency were issued by merchants and business firms. They are with few exceptions, the size of our large cents, struck chiefly in copper and brass with a few in white metal and german silver. This series was listed and numbered by Lyman Low. While both Low's original and Gutttag's later reprint are difficult to obtain, a more recent reprint is still available.

Civil War tokens were issued from 1861 to 1864 by merchants of more than three hundred towns in twenty-three states because of shortage of small change. They are for the most part the size of our small cents, usually depicting a patriotic design or motto on either one or both sides. They were struck in brass, copper, nickel, copper-nickel, white metal, german silver, silver, lead and zinc. Those with a merchant's advertisement on one side are usually called "Civil War cards," some eighty-five hundred in number. Those anonymously struck with designs or mottoes on both obverse and reverse, are called Patriotic Civil War tokens, some fifteen hundred in number. This series was listed and numbered in 1924 in a work compiled by Hetrich and Gutttag and are often identified by their numbers. A supplementary list, compiled by Joseph Barnet, was published in The Numismatist in 1943-4. In 1960, a revised listing of the Patriotics was prepared by George and Melvin Fuld and published by the Whitman Publishing Co.

United States Store cards are tokens issued by merchants, business firms, clubs, restaurants, etc., for advertising or trade purposes. Their significance is to keep before us many of the known and popular establishments of our country's earlier years, as well as the mode of life during that time. The older cards are usually of large cent size, the latter in all sizes. They were made of the usual different varieties of metal. United States Store Cards by Edgar H. Adams lists and numbers by states known tokens issued from 1789 to around 1860 or thereabouts. A recent reprint is available at a moderate cost. A comprehensive general list of "American Store or Business Card," was compiled by Dr. B. P. Wright and published in The Numismatist from 1898 to 1901 inclusive. Other specialized lists were prepared by Bushnell, Baker and others.

Military Emergency tokens issued by army sutlers, post traders, post canteens, post exchanges, navy ships, etc., are classified under this heading. An army sutler or post trader was a man appointed by the War Department prior to about 1880 who was granted rights to sell goods to a designated army unit or post. A list of sutler tokens issued during the Civil War was published in the 1946 volume of The Numismatist and a supplementary listing in the 1959 volume. In 1954, a comprehensive listing of post exchange, canteen and other military tokens was published in The Numismatist. All of these lists were reprinted and can be purchased from the Librarian of American Numismatic Association.

Indian Trader tokens were used by the traders in their dealings with Indians from 1850 to about 1930. With the growth of settlements the need for using actual currency became more and more a necessity, thus cancelling the use of this token. A primary listing was published in the 1951 volume of The Numismatist and a supplementary listing in the 1956 and 1957 volumes. Reprints can be purchased from the American Numismatic Association.

Political tokens are those depicting or relating to political figures or issues. Most popular are those associated with presidents and presidential candidates, from the John Adams administration through that of Lincoln, which were listed by Alfred H. Satterlee. A more recent and comprehensive listing, A Century of Campaign Buttons 1789-1889, was prepared by J. Doyle Dewitt and published in limited number in 1959.

Transportation tokens are issued for fares on any type of transportation, such as stage coaches, ferries, boats, horse cars, street cars, busses and trains or for crossing bridges or passing through toll gates. Collectors accept Atwoods Catalogue of United States and Canadian Transportation Tokens as the authority of this series. This check list identifies each token by a combination of symbols, letters and numbers plus the inscription found on the token.

Counters and spiel marken are tokens used in games, such as cards, etc., especially in whist. A list of these interesting tokens, many of which are close imitations of our early gold coinage, was compiled by Howard Kurth, published by the Numismatic Scrapbook.

Fraternal tokens are those issued by fraternal orders such as Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Columbus, etc., or by organizations such as reform societies. A list of Masonic Chapter pennies was prepared by Dr. B. P. Wright and published in the 1901, 1903 and 1904 volumes of The Numismatist.

For the serious token collector there are a number of listings such as those on Washington by Baker and Susan H. Douglas, Lincoln by Robert P. King, embossed shell cards by Tilton and Harry Gray, Bryan money by Farran Zerbe, hard rubber tokens by Melvin and George Fuld, wooden money and sales tax tokens by Emil DiBella, so-called dollars by Richard D. Kenney, current tokens and medals by Clifford Mishler, and several publications by the Whitman Publishing Co.

NUMISMATIC ORGANIZATIONS

L. M. Reagan

MANY beginning collectors seem to feel that they should not join a coin club until they are more advanced. Nothing could be more erroneous for, in fact, the beginner has more to gain from association with other collectors than has the advanced numismatist.

Numismatic organizations may be divided into three general classifications: local clubs, state and regional organizations, and national associations or societies. For the beginner especially, the local club is the most important. Except in rural and sparsely populated areas, there is a coin club within reach of almost everyone in this country. They vary in size from a dozen members who may meet in each other's homes to those of several hundred with meeting places in hotels or public halls. In most cases, meetings are held monthly on a fixed schedule. Membership dues, usually set to meet operating expenses such as rent of meeting place, stationery, postage, etc., are likely to be from $2 to $6 a year. Most clubs require only that an applicant have good character and an interest in collecting, with no question asked about the size of his collection.

The advantages to a collector of belonging to a local club are many, some of which are listed here although not all will apply equally to every collector. You can learn many facts about the coins, tokens, medals or paper money you collect from talks and exhibits made by others. You will see the various ways of collecting and learn something of the advantages and disadvantages of each. You will be able to keep posted better on prices and news relating to the hobby. Most clubs hold auctions so that members may purchase coins and dispose of duplicates—in other words, a manner of trading between members. Some clubs allow member-dealers to set up tables for the purpose of buying and selling numismatic items from and to members.

Participation in club activities appeals to many and provides a way of becoming acquainted with other collectors. Most clubs encourage members to make exhibits, which need not be elaborate, at meetings. Collectors willing to spend a little time on club activities will find no better way to become acquainted than to accept an office or other assignment with their local club. And any woman collector should consider this particularly, as probably half of the clubs in the country have women secretaries.

If you would like to find out about a club in your area, a local coin dealer will probably give you information. Most of the numismatic publications carry news items about many local clubs, sometimes giving dates and locations of meetings and the secretary's name. If all other inquiries fail, a letter to the office of the A.N.A. General Secretary will get the information for you.

Regional and state organizations exist principally for the purpose of holding one or two conventions each year. Dues are usually nominal and cover printing, mailing and other incidental expenses. Their conventions are usually two or three day affairs and worth attending, particularly since the travel distance to them is usually not great.

The American Numismatic Association is the only national organization in this country for the general collector, although there are some groups in such specialized fields as tokens and medals, and paper money. Membership in the A.N.A., which holds a four-day convention annually, is open to all those interested in numismatics, whether they collect coins, tokens, medals, paper money, odd and curious money, or just want to keep posted. Members receive a monthly magazine, The Numismatist, which has been published continuously since 1888. Members have access to books (borrowed by mail) in its extensive library. And they enjoy a certain prestige which goes with membership in the largest and most active numismatic organization in the world. Annual dues on a calendar year basis are $5, with an admission fee of $2 at the time of joining.

There are numismatic organizations in other countries also. Canada has a number of local clubs and a national body, the Canadian Numismatic Association. Mexico has its Sociedad Numismatica de Mexico, England its British Numismatic Society, and Australia the Numismatic Society of South Australia.

In summary, practically any collector will find advantages in belonging to a local coin club. It is difficult to think of any disadvantage.

will be the outstanding eastern affair of 1962. Ample space for this May 18-20 "Coin is King" show has been reserved in the Arlington Hotel in Binghamton, N. Y. Although the show will open at 9 a.m. on Friday, the Mayors of the Triple Cities will officially open it that evening by presenting the key to the Cities to ESNA President Paul C. Livingston of Syracuse. Saturday will feature bus trips, door prizes and the evening banquet. Auctions are set for Friday evening and Saturday afternoon. Most of the bourse tables were reserved two months or more in advance, assuring the collectors plenty of chances to buy and sell numismatic items. We invite everyone to attend, and expect the biggest attendance in ESNA's eleven year history. — FRED G. HUNTER, Chm.

Whitman's Survey

The annual survey on the Guide Book of U. S. Coins published by Whitman Publishing Co., to determine reader preferences has been completed with a thirty percent return of the forty-five hundred questionnaires mailed. Names of those queried were selected on a geographical basis only.

In general the answers favored the "Red Book" in its present form but there were some suggestions that will be incorporated in future editions: greater span of price coverage by adding new condition columns, mint figures to be moved to the coin listings, coin grading descriptions before each coin type and rearrangement of commemoratives in alphabetical order. The majority opposes listing of minute varieties of Lincoln cents, adding either minor varieties of Colonial pieces or more transitional pattern coins. The war time 5¢ pieces will be listed in future in conditions other than uncirculated, as they are now worth a recognized premium.

"A slight majority voted for including varieties of silver dollars dated 1878 to 1935. It was felt, however, that many collectors have asked for this more out of curiosity rather than because of actual need for information. Because voting in this area was so close (552-537), the publishers have decided to do further research in this field. Thousands of minor varieties exist, but it is doubtful if these coins are readily bought and sold as such. They apparently have no standard recognized values."

| | YES | NO |
|-----------------------------------------------------------|-----|-----|
| a. 1960 D cent with double mint mark | 392 | 665 |

GEORGIA STAMM CHAMBERLAIN, A. N. A. NO. 23480

Mrs. Robert S. (Georgia Stamm) Chamberlain, 804 Grand View Dr., Alexandria, Va., died December 12, 1961, age 51. Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, July 16, 1910, she was very young when her parents moved to New York City. She was brought up there and in Westport, Conn. After two years at Smith College, she transferred to Columbia University where she obtained her degree in journalism. As a young woman she studied sculpturing at the Art Students League in New York City, one of her teachers being the Utah sculptor Mahouri Young. She married Robert S. Chamberlain in 1941. Her husband and their sixteen year old son survive.

Mrs. Chamberlain was a member of the Alexandria, Va., branch of the National League of American Pen Women and the American Numismatic Association. She was the author of many articles, mostly on medallist art, which were published in several magazines, including The Numismatist. Among her contributions to the latter were "Moritz Fürst, Die-Sinker and Artist"; "Medals Made in America by Moritz Fürst"; "Robert Ball Hughes, Sculptor"; "John Reich, Assistant Engraver to the U. S. Mint"; "Joseph Willson, American Medallist"; and others. Mrs. Chamberlain's writings were noteworthy for their historical and technical accuracy based on hundreds of hours of research in the National Archives, their sensitivity and feeling for the art of the medal, for pride in achievements of our early medalists. — EGB

A.N.A. - C.N.A. COMBINED CONVENTIONS

Detroit, excitedly preparing for the August 15th to 18th combined A.N.A.-C.N.A. Convention, is widely known as a family city. But Detroit is also a city crowded with recreational and educational points of interest appealing to fathers and sons.

Early arrivals for the convention may watch the famed Detroit Tigers baseball team playing Baltimore in than one million people each year from all over the world see this and more — from exquisite silver fashioned by Paul Revere to a huge six hundred ton steam locomotive — at world famous Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, near Detroit. There's real adventure waiting for you and your family at this exciting treasureland of Americana.

a twilight double header on Tuesday, August 14, or a day game with Baltimore on Wednesday, August 15. The Tiger Stadium is ten minutes by taxi from the convention hotel.

Do you know that Detroit visitors may stand in the shadow of Edison, in the very room where he created the electric light, and literally dozens of other inventions that have changed the course of our lives. Will you be one who will trace the genius of the Wright Brothers in the shop where the airplane was born? More

Those interested in exploring Detroit night life might visit the Roostertail Supper Club, famed both for its delightful location on a pier of the Detroit River and for its star entertainment attractions. Across the river in neighboring Windsor, Ontario is the equally famed Elmwood Casino, popular for its Supper Club and excellent cuisine. Although we normally think of New York City or Hollywood in connection with modern television facilities, Detroit visitors interested in this field will find that Station WXYZ's Broadcast House is the showpiece of the TV industry.

When in Detroit allow time for a tour of one of the great auto assembly lines, where not only the product, but the method of making it have changed the world and every life in it in less than fifty years. While planning fun and recreation in Detroit don't forget the convention bourse and exhibits, the educational program, the auction, and the banquet. It's going to be a busy four days. Better come early and stay over. Plan now your Detroit August 15-18 visit!

BOOK REVIEWS

1962 Catalog of the Money of Puerto Rico, by Maurice M. Gould and Lincoln W. Higgle. Whitman Publishing Co., Racine, Wis., 84 pp., Illus., $1.00.

An important advantage which collectors and numismatists of today have over their predecessors is a great deal more published information on the coins and other items they acquire and study. The subject of this review is an excellent example of an inexpensive source of data, history and prices of a series that is not well known — "the coins, tokens and paper money which was once issued for use in the commonwealth that may someday become our 51st state."

This member of the Whitman Coin Reference Series is in the same format as the others, being 5¼ x 7¼ inches in size, with eighty-four high-quality pages bound in a limp black cover. Many of the coin illustrations may be found in other coin books, but the large number of token and paper money illustrations are, for the most part, new. We were greatly surprised at the number and variety of plantation and merchants tokens which were issued in this relatively small area.

Retail prices are shown for over two hundred fifty items in several conditions. The authors state that, in some cases, it was difficult to find a basis for pricing items, but that supply and demand will tend to establish them in the future. In addition to much new information, the authors have included that which has already been published, and have included a bibliography for reference. As has so often happened when a book has been made available with complete coverage of a series, it is likely that this one will stimulate the collecting interest and activity in the money of Puerto Rico. — GLENN S.

The Colonial Coinage of the U. S. Virgin Islands, by Lincoln W. Higgle. Whitman Publishing Co., Racine, Wis., Illus., $1.00.

The publisher tells us that it was originally intended to cover the subject of this book in the one on Puerto Rican money. However, so much new information was brought out in the research on both series that it was necessary to separate them. Production problems limit the size of books in the Whitman Coin Reference Series.

Much of what is contained in the review of the Puerto Rican book applies to this one. It has sixty-four pages of the same size, same style cover, is illustrated, and prices over two hundred items in one or more conditions. Also, it gives data and a historical monetary sketch of the islands. Again, a number of authorities, both in this country and overseas, were consulted and their contributions included.

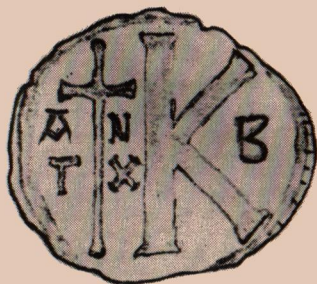

There is one notable difference. Whereas only a few coins and little paper money was issued in Puerto Rico, there were sizeable issues of both in the Danish West Indies. This book lists about one hundred coins, and notes of several issues include those of the Bank of St. Thomas and the National Bank of the Danish West Indies. All known types of notes are finely illustrated, as are the coins and merchant's tokens.

If we haven't missed any, this is ninth in the Reference Series; and all but two deal with money related to the United States but which has not been covered adequately in popularly priced books. Besides being invaluable to collectors of the subject material, they are fine additions to the library of any numismatist or student of U. S. history. — GLENN S.

NEW BYZANTINE MINT ISSUE DISCOVERED

The standard works on Byzantine coins show that Anastasius I (491-518) minted twenty nummia coins only at Constantinople and Nicomedia. It has seemed strange that the prolific mint at Antioch did not also issue these useful "small change" coins with the familiar large K on the reverse. A recent find of such a coin now shows that the Antioch Mint did indeed issue a twenty nummia piece, and establishes a more complete picture of the minting activities in this important Byzantine commercial center.

As is so often the case with Byzantine bronzes, this coin is irregular in shape and its surface is corroded. But on the obverse lettering is clear and the usual bust of Anastasius is in profile to the right. The reverse has the large K in the center. To the left is a tall cross dividing the letters of the Mint name positioned in two rows, AN/TX. On the right, between the two limbs of the K, is a B indicating the second officina of the Antioch Mint.

Twenty nummia piece (enlarged drawing) of Anastasius I, Antioch Mint

The coin is oval, or egg-shaped, measuring 29 mm. horizontally and 25 mm. vertically. It weighs 113 grains.

The provenance of the coin is uncertain as it was found in a small bazaar shop in Ankara, Turkey. Such shops normally obtain coins from farmers or military recruits who come to Ankara from the surrounding regions of Anatolia. It seems probable this coin was turned up during the autumn plowing in 1961 as it still had mud caked to it when discovered. Byzantine coins from the Antioch Mint are quite common in the Ankara bazaar, having been brought into this part of Anatolia by merchants and travellers going from Antioch to Constantinople.

The basic studies on Byzantine coinage (Sabatier, Goodacre, Lhotka, Wroth, etc.) report that while Antioch minted only the forty and five nummia bronzes during the twenty-seven year reign of Anastasius I, this Mint struck all four of the denominations current in that period (forty, twenty, ten and five nummia) in the following nine years of the reign of Justin I (518-527). It would be reasonable to assume that Antioch under the longer reign of Anastasius I also struck the twenty nummia denomination and the present find bears out this assumption. However, the strikings were apparently not in sufficient quantity to have survived in any numbers. So far as the author can determine, this is the only coin of this type reported in numismatic publications to date. — DAVID G. BRIGGS, A.N.A. No. 35098

No coin boards or other numismatic supplies, or books showing the premium value of coins, are sold by the Government. Neither is it the policy of the Treasury Department to recommend dealers to whom coins could be sold.

He recommends keeping up the latest dates and buying the scarce pieces which are constantly rising in price. The appearance of Miss Eva Adams, Director of the Mint, as a guest was a pleasant surprise. She spoke on the general scope of her job, the processing and distribution of proofs, and how the use of vending machines has changed the demand for coins. A question and answer period followed, and Miss Adams autographed books and other items for members. — MAE L. CLARKE, Sec.

At the March meeting in the Sheraton-Palace Hotel in San Francisco the forty-nine attending provided seventeen outstanding exhibits and Martin Pleskow gave a fine talk on the British Empire and its coinage. — MRS. HARRY CUTLER, Sec.

Forty-five members and guests gathered in the Museum of Arts and Sciences for the 61st meeting of the Evansville Coin Club the afternoon of March 25. Harry Basler shared with us his enthusiasm over his recent finds of a 1914-D cent and an 1862 Indian head "store-keeper token." Alarmed over several local coin robberies recently, members were warned to keep their valuable collections in a safe place. The program consisted of a panel discussion, during which panelists Leland Moon advised "that by attending monthly club meetings a new collector can learn a great deal about coins"; Dick Dyer suggested that "club members try greeting people with 'Do you have any old coins?';" Dudley Cappelle advocated "lock up your collections and keep your peace of mind and your coins"; and Bettie Klaus expressed the belief that "it helps to have a more knowledgeable collector to help guide you through the early stages of collecting." — BETTYE J. Following the proclamation by Governor Kerner, designating National Coin Week in Illinois, the Club will place displays in local business houses. We have set November 10-11 as the dates of our third annual coin show and auction, and will be glad to hear from bourse dealers and exhibitors. — FRANK G. COLTON, Publ. Chm.

The eighty-four members and guests attending the February 19 meeting of Santa Barbara Coin Club enjoyed a talk by Fred Claveria on the Spanish Pillar dollar. Fred used a chalkboard and drew various parts of the coin on it during his talk. He described the designs on the coin in detail and explained that this piece, issued from 1732 to 1772, was accepted in practically all parts of the world. In Colonial America it was practically the standard of exchange and was considered legal tender until just before the Civil War. The pillars on the coin, borrowed from Roman and Greek coins, represented strength, firmness and support. The Imperial crown was on the left pillar and the Royal crown on the right, with the two worlds between indicating the extent of influence of the Spanish crown over the two hemispheres. The "Plus Ultra" on the ribbon on one pillar refers to the land beyond which was under Spanish rule. Claveria explained the coat-of-arms on the obverse, pointing out that the fleur de lis was added when Phillip V became King because he was the nephew of Louis XIV of France. While many dates of the coin are common, the first and last year, and certain dates of some Central and South American mints, are quite rare and expensive. He warned us that there are counterfeits (and replicas) of the coin and that some are difficult to detect. Don Jurgensen showed beautiful colored slides of his recent trip to the Florida conventions via Mexico. — GWEN SENTIS, Sec.

The Glass Center Coin Club, Toledo, O., opened its second year with an open house meeting which drew 125 members and guests. He has served presidential terms with the Ohio State Numismatic Association and the Penn-Ohio Coin Clubs. Edward Schodowski was elected to the Board of Governors, and club membership was extended to three applicants. Our membership rose from forty-nine to seventy-seven in 1961. For the program, the secretary conducted a coin quiz, scored as a ball game. Questions were prepared as to hit value and placed in a box. Players drew questions when they came to bat. It proved to be a lot of fun and served as a good review of the hobby. A cake, baked by the secretary and decorated with gold wrapped coin candy and containing hidden treasures for three lucky people, was served during the social hour. — ESTHER M. OYSTER, Sec.

The San Diego County Inter-Club Numismatic Council held its second annual joint meeting on March 5 in Vasa Hall in San Diego. Dan Harley, Secretary of "Cal State," spoke to the 265 guests on "My Favorite Coins." Jones introduced the other 1962 officers, as follows: Vice President, Douglas Decker; Secretary, Charles Jackson; Treasurer, Leonel C. Panosh. He also introduced the presidents of the ten member clubs: Bob Earheart, Al Baber, Carl Schmidt, Forest Hogue, Charles Jackson, Bil West, Guy DeWolf, Herbert Holt, Douglas Decker and Paul Hamm. With the addition of four new junior members at the February meeting, our total membership reached sixty. — MRS. GLEN C. TEMPLE, Sec.

Speaking at the twenty-fifth Silver Jubilee banquet of San Diego Numismatic Society, A.N.A. Second Vice President Herbert Bergen said that some "fast buck artists" are in our hobby today and that it is up to the real numismatists to keep their influence to a minimum. Bergen's humorous but thought-provoking talk on the history of numismatics was enjoyed by ninety-two guests at the affair held in the U. S. Grant Hotel in San Diego. Helen Schwenger had a most unusual exhibit of animal coins at the March 30 meeting of the Club Of Illinois Numismatists (Homewood). Her "International Zoo" was arranged on a cookie sheet, with an entrance, walks and exits marked, and with groups of animal coins arranged in individual cages. Another cookie sheet was utilized to show a country scene, where coins of birds flew in the sky, animals roamed in the grass, a fish and a beaver coin swam in the river, and a coin with a squirrel perched in a tree. Paul and Mrs. Otis received many compliments on their exhibit and Lois' talk on Venezuela. The exhibit contained the colorful Coat of Arms of Venezuela, Coat of Arms of the City of Caracas, the flag of Venezuela, coins from the 1936 five bolivar to the new 1960 one bolivar, Venezuelan paper money, magazines, booklets, and the issue of "Venezuela Up-to-Date" which told of the dedication of the Simon Bolivar statue in Washington, D. C. in 1959. It also included a bronze medal commemorating this dedication, issued by the Venezuelan Government with a replica of the statue in high relief on the obverse. The reverse bears both the Coat of Arms of Venezuela and the Great Seal of the United States, with the inscription UNA SOLA DEBE SER LA PATRIA above and DE TODOS LOS AMERICANOS BOLIVAR below. Mrs. Otis told how the exhibit was made possible through the generosity of the Banco Central de Venezuela of Caracas (A.N.A. No. 26627) and the cooperation of Alfonso Godoy, Chicago Consul General of Venezuela. Twenty beautiful enlarged photographs around the room, showing scenes from different areas in Venezuela, reminded one of the saying "one picture is worth a thousand words."

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE ALL FOLLOWING CONDITIONS

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Advertising Manager, S. W. Freeman, P. O. Box 591, Newport, Ark. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

No advertising accepted from minors.

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space (subject to any current limitation) is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Advertising Manager.

Unless under contract, smaller units than one-half page accepted subject to available space in desired issue.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the Advertising Manager by the 5th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Illustrations: All cuts to be provided by the advertisers, care being used to see that they do not exceed in measurement the limits of the space unit desired. The Advertising Manager, when absolutely necessary, will have engravings made from furnished photographs, at national rates, to be paid for by advertiser.

We cannot accept mats or stereos.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be retyped for the printer; this should not be required. Mail Bid Sales listing not acceptable. It is also the policy of the magazine to limit its advertisements to those of numismatic character.

Preparation of Copy: Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error — something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet. Send originals, not carbon copies. Use only paper of good quality, and not of extremely light weight. All copy must be typed, no handwritten accepted.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 7th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

MONEY TALKS

WE MUST THANK YOU for the magnificent response to our offering of U. S. proof gold coins.

SO QUICKLY SOLD OUT that our April ads, in which some of the proofs were listed were almost meaningless. Oh, there were many other interesting coins listed besides the proofs, and these are moving nicely.

BUYING BINGE BRINGS this A.K. to decision to head for other pastures. Eastern trip to N.Y.C. for Metropolitan Convention and Milwaukee for the Central States affair. A few intermediate stops.

TO EUROPE THIS JUNE and looking forward to the Congress of the International Association of Professional Numismatists at Innsbruck.

A FEW THINGS ON the fire should make for a most interesting and profitable trip. Especially looking forward to visit with many fine colleagues — and to buying a nice collection or two (colleagues, please note!)

ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF U.S. COINS finally completed and released. Highly satisfied, especially since it afforded an opportunity to present a work that I wanted to prepare for years.

U.S. TYPE COINS as well as Patterns, Trial and Experimental pieces of superb quality in chronological order in an historical presentation which may inspire collectors to adopt a new plan for their own numismatic holdings.

UNTIL MAY 15th, the book is available at only $3.00. On that date, the price will be $7.50. Library Editions may be ordered at $10.00 per copy.

THAT DOES IT for now.

Presidential Art Medals

Three series of high quality, finely sculptured medals are available in the original Presidential Art historic medals program: the Presidential series, the Statehood series and the Signers of the Declaration of Independence series. In the Presidential series one medal is struck in honor of each president. The Statehood series commemorates each of the fifty states and the Signers of the Declaration of Independence series commemorates each of the fifty-six signers. One medal will be struck each month, alternating between the three series, until the program is complete.

Medals in all three series have won wide acclaim for their fine sculpturing, originality, and for the likeness to the individual they honor. President Kennedy was the first purchaser of the first-in-a-series Kennedy medal. He uses these medals as good will mementos on his missions abroad. Specific approval to publicly display this medal has been granted by the White House. Assistance in preparatory research work and participation in dedication ceremonies has also been given by Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt and Ohio Governor DiSalle.

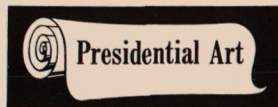

The high quality that has contributed so much to the prominence of these medals was achieved largely by the sculptor, Mr. Ralph J. Menconi. His work in full portrait and high relief has won international recognition . . . his abilities are unmatched in the field of sculpturing.

Each medal is struck in platinum, silver and bronze. Platinum and silver medals are serially numbered and of limited issue. A limit has not been placed on the production of bronze medals as yet . . . they are still available at the original issue price of $2.50 each.

You can see all of these medals at your local coin shop or you can get complete information by writing to Presidential Art Medals, Inc.

There are many imitations but only one Presidential Art medal. For medals of the very finest quality insist on Presidential Art medals. To check their authenticity look for the letters PAM on Presidential medals (except the Kennedy medal), SAM on Statehood medals and DSAM on medals in the Declaration Signers series. These letters are under the bust on the obverse of each medal.

COIN MEDALS . . .

The Magnificent Medals of Real Numismatic Interest

A series of beautifully sculptured, numismatically designed medals commemorating famous coin designers. The Augustus Saint-Gaudens and Victor D. Brenner medals, the first two in the COIN MEDALS series, are now ready for immediate shipment, and the Charles E. Barber medal will be ready in June.

COIN MEDALS are sculptured in very high relief on both obverse and reverse by master artist Robert Schabel, and quality struck by The Metal Arts Company of Rochester, New York. The obverse of every COIN MEDAL depicts the finest medallion work of the artist being commemorated, and the reverse, as shown above, symbolizes his work in coins.

COIN MEDALS are issued in bronze, and in a serially numbered pure silver issue not to exceed 5000. Each medal is three inches in diameter, and weigh close to a half-pound in silver, so they are not to be confused with ordinary coin size medals.

PRICES OF COIN MEDALS

in serially numbered pure silver, in velvet lined case$35.00

The Victor D. Brenner Medal: Bronze $5.50, or2 for $10.00

A detailed catalogue of all Spanish and Spanish Colonial Onzas, or gold pieces of eight. Lists types and dates and initials of assayers.

Written in English and Spanish with dollar valuations.

1,000 numbered copies. Printed, on rich, large octavo paper with gold-colored photos of many coins.

Introduction and bibliography in English.

Highly recommended to collectors of gold coins in general, and especially to students of American numismatics because the onza was legal tender in America until 1857.

It Was Only Natural for the House of the Famous Portraits in Silver

To Produce A Combination PRESIDENTIAL-STATEHOOD SERIES that has become the elite of the numismatic field!

In Popular Silver Dollar Size

(approximately)

To do this, we required from our artists and sculptors, a bolder relief with greater depth — the dignity of unique artistry — struck with quality on the finest metals. It was a big order. Better “building” in any field demands strict attention to detail. We did this and the results have been rewarding.

Frankly, the nation-wide response we have received reflects surprise — surprise at so much Quality at so little COST.

Yes, it was a considerable challenge to couple the dignity of quality with the attractiveness of low cost. Proudly, we submit this accomplishment. And, really now, why buy something less when you can easily afford the very best?

COMPARISON PROVES — SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER

This coupon guarantees that you may purchase the entire Series at not more than $10 for each Medal at time of issue.

GREAT AMERICAN GENERALS

AN IMPORTANT NEW SERIES OF COMMEMORATIVE MEDALS

© WAHL CO., 1962

In May 1962, we will issue the Ulysses S. Grant Medal, to be followed in June by the Robert E. Lee Medal. Succeeding issues will be released in September and December, quarterly thereafter. 32mm (1¼") in diameter, each medal bears the subject's portrait beautifully sculptured in high relief on the obverse, biographical data on the reverse. Prices: Pure Silver (.999 fine) — $10, Bronze — $2.

To assure future value, production of silver medals of each issue will be limited to only 1,000 serially-numbered pieces. Not more than two silver pieces of an issue will be sold to any one customer. Serial numbers are assigned in the sequence in which orders with full payment are received. Purchasers of the first medal have a priority on the same serially-numbered silver medal of the next issue. Since these limited issues are sure to sell out very quickly and become coveted — and valuable — collector's items, we urge that you order now. Not sold through dealers.

GATLING MEDAL FREE! Subscribe now for the four 1962 "Generals" silver medals, sending full payment with order, and we will immediately mail to you, as a bonus, a 60mm bronze Gatling Gun Centennial Medal, which regularly sells for $5. Only a limited number of these medals is still available.

They are economical too, providing a most luxurious setting for your favorite sets at the lowest cost consistent with highest quality.

ALL CAPITAL holders are made of Plexiglas, the lifetime plastic which will never fade or discolor. Each holder is made of three pieces of Plexiglas, the outer pieces being transparent, and the center piece in beautiful blue, red, or green transparent, jet black or milk white. All holders are titled in gold.

Price $1.75, postpaid

The coin openings are tapered and carefully sized to insure accurate fit of coins. Each holder is assembled with a generous quantity of plastic screws. The Proof Set holder is held with 6 screws.

Large stocks of holders are carried to insure speedy delivery, but some colors are occasionally out of stock. If alternate colors are given, you can be assured of quick delivery. All holders are match marked at the edge for ease of re-assembly.

ALL CAPITAL PRODUCTS ARE UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED.

CAPITAL PLASTICS, INC., now offers you genuine three-piece Plexiglas holders for series of coins, types, gold and other sets, with each opening fully described—this new series to be known as PAO holders (printed at openings).

And listen to this, these high quality PAO holders are offered at prices you would expect to pay for conventional holders. Construction, quality, attention to detail—and prompt shipment—have become bywords with CAPITAL, and you will find that our new line of PAO holders is no exception to the rule.

The following holders are now in stock in BLACK OR WHITE, for immediate delivery. NO special arrangements of dates or titles are available. Dates, varieties and descriptions are as listed in the 15th edition of the Red Book.

Useful for cleaning all kinds of coins, but particularly adapted to cleaning coins of copper or nickel.

EASY TO USE AND ECONOMICAL!
FAST ACTION — IT ACTUALLY CLEANS IN SECONDS!

Does not add shine, but brings out natural color, including original brilliance if it is still there under tarnish or coating. Dull or dark uncirculated coins become brilliant uncirculated coins in seconds.

This result of years of experiment can be safely used on valuable coins to improve their appearance and increase their value.

On sale in many leading stores in 4-oz. bottles, with full directions, at $1.00.

If your dealer does not yet have it, send us $1.00 for 3-oz. bottle (enough to clean hundreds of coins) carefully packed and postpaid to any address in the United States or Canada.

SPECIAL OFFER TO DEALERS

Send $4.00 for six 4-oz. bottles of "CCC," postpaid.

IF YOU ARE THINKING OF SELLING YOUR COLLECTION . . .

It will be of advantage to both of us to contact The Montrose Coin Gallery, before selling elsewhere.

Ours is a sincere desire to buy at fair prices, hard to get material in choice condition. For many items we will pay considerably over the prices listed at retail in the 15th edition of the Guide Book.

Our records indicate that we have purchased about 80 percent of the collections offered to us in recent years with satisfaction and cash delivered to the seller on the spot.

We are looking for complete collections of United States coinage or sets. Also of interest to us are single pieces of choice scarce items. We are NOT looking for speculative hoards such as rolls, proof sets, medals, etc.

Please do write NOW, letting us know what you have to offer. If necessary we will travel to your city to inspect your collection if warranted.

All correspondence will be acknowledged.
Our reference is Bank of America, Montrose, California. If you wish to telephone for any information call CHurchill 9-5541 or CHapman 5-9223 or CHapman 5-9224.
If we buy your collection you will be reimbursed for your phone call.

BUSINESS IS GOOD!

Yes, that's the truth — it is almost too good. Since Jan. 1, most of my stock of foreign crowns has been sold, and my customers are hungry for more.

If you have duplicates, or a collection, of nice crowns, please let me know, as I am in the market and need stock. Also, I deal in minor foreign, and shall be glad to have offers from either dealers or collectors on minor or crowns.

If you are a collector, please write for free price list of foreign coins. If you are a dealer, write on your letterhead for new wholesale price list just released.

RARE WASHINGTON MEDAL

Halliday Medal. (1800-01) Civil bust to r. HALLIDAY S. on truncation. Around; GEORGE WASHINGTON PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. Rev. A draped pedestal, upon which rests fasces and a sword encircled by an olive wreath; around, COMMISSION RESIGNED: PRESIDENCY RELINQUISHED; 1797 in exergue. Bronze; 53 mm. Baker 70 (Very rare). EF or better, but with one minor and one severe reverse rim bruise (the result of some fool dropping it). Undoubtedly one of the most artistic and rare contemporary Washington medals, produced by Halliday, a well known engraver of Birmingham, England. Ex Brand coll. Only the third we have handled in the last eleven years (which encompasses the Garvan, Raymond, Brand, Boyd colls., among others, of early Washingtonia), and certainly not the worse of the three.
